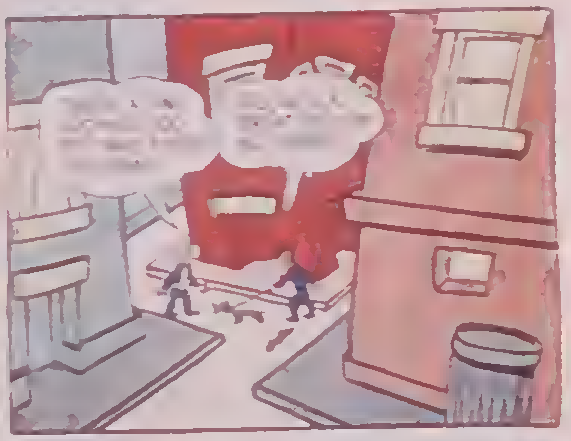
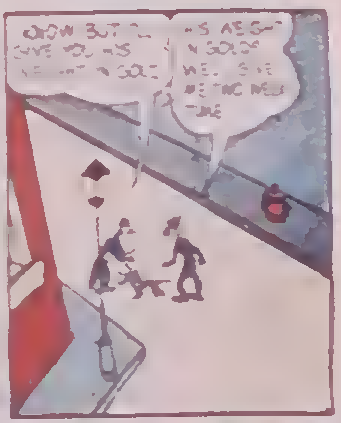
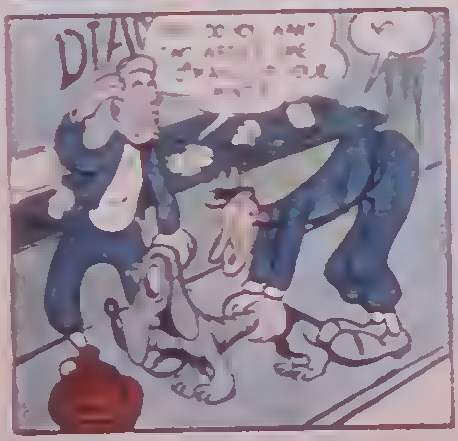
"A WEIGHTY PROBLEM"







Death's Wings Brushed By!

The Adventures of An American WAC Overseas

By John Messmann

"THIS IS IT at last!" The words uttered aloud came from the open lips of Lieutenant Penny Graves as she stood [illegible] and looked about at the torn and blackened [illegible] scarred by [illegible] Changking.

During the months [illegible] spent in the Chinese theatre Penny [illegible] hoping, longing, the unconquerable heart of China [illegible] that had drug itself out of countless lap bombings to [illegible] assisted defiance into the enemy's teeth.

But headquarters had other plans for Penny and [illegible] she would never receive a chance [illegible] Changking her chance had come. Not more than a day before General Warren had asked her to accompany him as [illegible] on a series of inspections [illegible] Chinese [illegible] Penny jumped at the [illegible] and now [illegible] she prepared [illegible] Changking.

Now let me see, Penny thought [illegible] she entered down a narrow street [illegible] up some [illegible] to avoid [illegible]

She walked [illegible] stepping [illegible] to loose [illegible] dusty cracked [illegible] row upon row of small rooms crowding each other and flowing into the street.

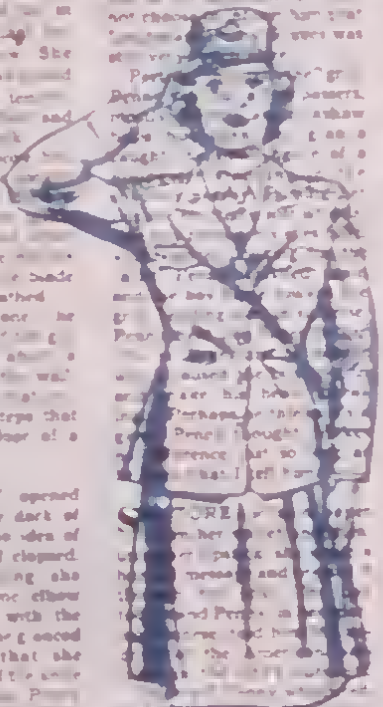
Finally she [illegible] her eyes [illegible] by an array of small finely molded vases. She entered the store through a door that sprung open easily and found herself alone in a room where [illegible] the shelves [illegible] At [illegible] the room [illegible] the back room [illegible]

Penny tapped [illegible] to announce [illegible] called. She [illegible] and [illegible] hoped the shopkeeper was [illegible]

Her glance swept the [illegible] some bamboo crates. Half [illegible] of the crates a figure crumpled [illegible] the floor, legs [illegible] from beneath a blue robe. Penny [illegible] gasp and stepped swiftly to the crate. He lives [illegible] as the figure [illegible] under [illegible] a short handled [illegible] back [illegible] Penny saw a piece of paper [illegible] and began to [illegible]

Opening [illegible] task she [illegible] the tall [illegible] Penny's thoughts [illegible] engaging [illegible] aside in dread of attempted [illegible] a [illegible] She saw [illegible] of the blow that struck the spot where she had stood. She spun [illegible] nothing [illegible] her feet at the [illegible] and [illegible] herself facing a [illegible] man, no taller than [illegible] and wearing the shorts and loose blouse of a [illegible] boy. His eyes were the [illegible] a coiled [illegible] snake and he snarled as he [illegible] at her.

A short [illegible] sailed by her [illegible] stepped [illegible] to [illegible] covered her head [illegible] with her [illegible] She [illegible] arms [illegible] at [illegible] on the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]



WHEN PENNY opened her eyes in the dark of the cellar she had no idea of how much time had elapsed. Raising herself on one elbow her head groaning with the effort. It was when she glanced down at herself that she gasped at the sight of the white rayon from Penny's [illegible]. She [illegible] and drew forth her mirror and her wound, enameled compact. The mirror had a jagged [illegible] where the blade had passed through and the compact bore a deep nick where the force of the man's thrust had almost pierced the metal. Penny quickly pieced the picture together. She had been left as dead. She was alive, thanks to her compact, but she had felt the wings of death brush by!

Carefully she stepped about the cellar and [illegible] a dim beam of light entering from a tiny barred [illegible]. She clambered upon a barrel and reached the grill. It looked out [illegible] the street. [illegible] a market [illegible] and did not know [illegible] she began [illegible] to shouting for help [illegible] and choked [illegible] was [illegible]

Penny [illegible] Perhaps [illegible] a shadow [illegible] a laugh [illegible] a [illegible] inside [illegible] He [illegible] and plunged [illegible] stairs, leaving the [illegible] there Penny [illegible] herself.

"She is a tough one," he [illegible] as [illegible] across the floor [illegible] a crate [illegible] against the wall. He shoved aside the [illegible] wearing a flight of steps that ended at the door [illegible] a cellar.

[illegible] went [illegible] Penny [illegible] She [illegible] and drew forth her mirror and her wound, enameled compact. The mirror had a jagged [illegible] where the blade had passed through and the compact bore a deep nick where the force of the man's thrust had almost pierced the metal. Penny quickly pieced the picture together. She had been left as dead. She was alive, thanks to her compact, but she had felt the wings of death brush by!

No [illegible] stepped [illegible] she heard a [illegible] a shaft of light broke down the stairs, followed by footsteps. He's coming back, Penny said to herself [illegible] into the deepest [illegible] for a surprise [illegible] as she thought [illegible] attacker a shock.

Penny knew she hadn't the strength to battle as she had before, and this time her only power would make use of his [illegible]. She slid around the edge of the cellar and her hand closed upon a shovel. She took a firm grip upon the handle and waited, hardly breathing.

But as the footsteps drew closer Penny saw [illegible] shadowy figure but two! The first held a flashlight and as [illegible] narrowed [illegible] his face she recognized her at last. He raising the light over the floor and back again [illegible] heard his expressive exclamation as only the hottest [illegible] greeted him.

The other man spoke excitedly [illegible] and took the flashlight. He swung it about the room and Penny watched the beam draw nearer and nearer. When it was [illegible] a few feet from where she crouched she swiftly, [illegible] sprang forward and brought the shovel [illegible] in a [illegible] as [illegible] at the one holding the light. She [illegible] the shovel connect with [illegible] and the man went down [illegible] a limp heap.

Turning quickly she brought the shovel down on the other's head as he dived [illegible] her. She heard his groan as he fell. Penny picked up the flashlight just as more voices were heard and a grateful sight met her eyes. It was the [illegible] followed by a group [illegible] American soldiers.

"Am I glad to see you!" sighed Penny as they led her out.

"What," said one G.I. "You look like you've been through a war, right?"

Penny faced General Warren wearing a number of adhesive plasters and [illegible] more than a little tired.

"I still [illegible] what it was all about," she said wearily. "I just went in to buy a little vase."

"You stumbled into one of the Japanese spy rings we've been hunting down," he told her. "The proprietor had outlived his usefulness and you walked in on the killing. Then, of course, you had to be taken care of."

And [illegible] reflected Penny [illegible] looking forward to visiting Chungking!"
